

Andrew Sidoli LCSW, CADAC

Andrew Sidoli is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker and Certified addiction Counselor with an extensive 20-year background in a multitude of Chemical Dependency and Mental Health settings. His education includes a bachelor's degree in Child Development and Family Studies, and a master's degree in Clinical Social Work. Prior to joining Clere Consulting, Andrew was Chief Clinical Officer at Recovery Ways in Salt Lake City and Executive Clinical Director at Shadow Mountain Recovery in their centers in NM, CO and UT.

During that time, he designed curriculums, implemented programming and developed successful Family Programs. His experience with Attachment, Family Systems, and his training and experience with Trauma brings a client centered holistic approach to his work with families and individuals. His experience has shaped his firm belief in human strength and resiliency and his passion in working with families and individuals affected by substance use and mental health challenges; he is committed to helping individuals and families greatly improve their quality of life. His experience with the development of clinical and medical programs, and his operational skills complements our team at Clere Consulting. Prior to joining Clere, Andrew has been actively engaged in several community recovery initiatives and served a variety of agencies committed to bringing change in their communities.
